Where the Weight Fell. Among the ancestors of Wendell Phillips were several Puritan clergymen. Perhaps it was a push of heredity which made him, at five years of age, a preacher. His congregation was composed of circles of chairs arranged in his father's parlor, while a taller chair, with a bible on it, served him for a pulpit. He would harangue these wooden auditors by the hour. "Wendell," said his father to him one day, "don't you get tired of this?" "No, papa," wittily replied the boy-preacher; "I don't get tired, but it is rather hard on the chairs."

Rushing Business.

Recently a well-known partner of a brokerage house was seen rushing wildly downstairs in a broad street skyscraper. A friend stopped him and asked the cause of the hurry. "Why, an old client of mine stepped in to see me for a moment and the fool office boy did not tell me I was in an inside office and he left saying he was going to be shaved, so I am following him up." Later the broker was again met by his friend, who called out genially: "Did you find your customer in the barber's?" "Yes, old man, and he gave me a 10-share order in New York Central," was the triumphant reply. The friend said nothing, but thought all the more, for had not the same broker refused to carry "a mere 50 shares of Union Pacific" for him in 1906 on the plea that the firm did not care for "odd lots?"—Wall Street Journal.

How to Cure Stammering.

Stammering is due to a peculiarly nervous temperament, and only very sympathetic treatment can effect a cure. In a child it should have immediate attention, and the first thing is to improve the little one's health by means of plenty of sleep, fresh air and good food. Every day he should take deep breathing exercises in the open air, to strengthen the muscles of the throat, and counteract a spasmodic habit of breathing. Notice should be taken of the sounds which the little stammerer has most trouble with, and sentences containing these sounds should be composed for him to repeat each day—very slowly and clearly. He should be asked to read aloud every day, and what is very important, he should never be laughed at or scolded.

Pride of the Family.

"A Book of Scotch Humor" illustrates anew of a native of Annapolis the saying that a prophet is not without honor save in his own country. "I ken them a'," said the rustic, speaking of the Carlyles. "Jock's a doctor about London. Tam's a harem-scarem kind o' chiel, an' wreaths book an' that. But Jamie—yon's his farm you see ower yonder—Jamie's the man o' that family, an' I'm proud to say I ken him. Jamie Carlyle, sir, feeds the best swine that come into Dumfries market."

Cloves Main Source of Income.

Nine-tenths of the world's supply of cloves comes from the island of Zanzibar, a British protectorate, on the east coast of Africa. The government receives as a tax one bale out of each five. As many as 200,000 bales have been produced in a season. The industry, which has long been the salvation of the little island, and with its scant population, really has its beginning in 1860, when an Arab planted 200 shrubs. Said Burghash, sultan of the island, saw the commercial possibilities of the plant and caused cloves to be set out by his people. A cyclone in 1872 devastated the island and uprooted the trees, but within a short time the sultan had them replaced. Since then the industry has grown steadily.
